Subject: "Trifecta of Absurdity"

Amen! This guy has hit the nail on the head! Of course, I am only sharing MY personal opinion.

Enough!

Ramras hits a trifecta

In the Legislature's debate about fixing Alaska's corruption-tainted oil tax, Fairbanks Republican Rep. Jay Ramras is providing unintentional comic relief. From his perch on the House Oil and Gas Committee, he has committed a trifecta of absurdity.

First, he suggested that Gov. Sarah Palin was the second coming of Joe McCarthy, the anti-Communist witch hunter of the 1950s. Ramras seemed to be saying that with mean ol' Sarah pushing so hard for a new oil production tax, legislators like him who dared resist the change faced McCarthy-style political persecution.

Next, Ramras compared himself to the famous unknown protester in China who stopped a line of tanks in Tiananmen Square during a brief uprising in the late 1980s. If necessary, Ramras said, he'd do the same -- meaning, presumably, he'd stand up to the oppressive power of the state Legislature and governor and defend the poor, powerless oil companies of Alaska.

Finally, Ramras complained about how hard it is to be an oil company in Alaska. Those poor companies, he said -- the masses of Alaskans just don't understand how hard it is to scour the world looking for oil and try to keep making more money so your shareholders will be happy.

Memo to Rep. Ramras: Oil company shareholders aren't the ones you're paid to worry about. Check your Alaska Constitution. You're paid to worry about Alaskans, who are shareholders in Alaska's oil wealth. Your job is, as the Alaska Constitution says, to get Alaskans the maximum benefit from the development of those publicly owned resources.

There's plenty of room to disagree about what "maximum benefit" means when a legislator is making oil tax decisions. In that debate, Alaska's oil companies and supporters have no trouble making their voices heard, without the rhetorical excesses of Jay Ramras.

BOTTOM LINE: Some legislators don't know when they are hurting their own cause.

Subject: Cancellation of 10:00 a.m. deployment today!

Governor - I just spoke with McHugh Pierre. The deployment that we had on your schedule for 10:00 a.m. today happened yesterday morning. There was no ceremony - it was just a handful that deployed for 45 days. Apparently it was continuation of group that went out Sunday evening (Lt. Gov) attended that one. Sorry for any inconvenience. I am working to comply with their desire to have six different Native tongues available on the touch screen voting machines. We already provide language assistance in certain precincts, but we don't have audio recordings available on the touchscreens in the Native dialects. Justice threatened to sue over it before picking up the phone to tell us they thought we had a problem. Seems like a suit happy time of year for folks.

Unfortunately, today is a disaster -- big things exploding in my oil and gas world, so this was a major rush job. And I will not breach surface until tonight. But here are my thoughts, for what they are worth, based upon your original draft.

Chamber Summit Focuses on Education, Workforce

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Ben Bernanke, speaking at the U.S. Chamber's Institute for a Competitive Workforce (ICW) Summit, offered advice to business and community leaders - invest in education. "As an investment, education provides excellent returns, both for individuals and for society," Bernanke said at the fourth annual Education and Workforce Summit in Washington, D.C.

Small Businesses Expand Markets Through Trade
The Bush administration has negotiated free trade agreements (FTAs) with Peru, Colombia, Panama, and South Korea. If approved by Congress and signed into law, these trade deals would greatly expand opportunities for U.S. businesses by lowering tariffs and other market barriers. Following is a glimpse at three U.S. small businesses that are already enjoying success in these markets and are counting on the pending FTAs to strengthen their market share.

Overtime Lawsuits Escalate

With employees taking on more managerial duties and putting in more time at the office, plaintiffs' lawyers are aggressively pushing to expand definitions of and exploit gaps in overtime laws. This chase for jackpot verdicts and multimillion-dollar settlements has led to a surge in overtime or wage-and-hour class action lawsuits at the state and federal levels against companies of all sizes.

Social networking Web sites such as MySpace and Facebook allow you to connect online with people you know, and through them, to others you may not have met when introductions were generally made face-to-face.

Hi Mike,

Just wanted to be sure you heard about this and passed the word to the appropriate folks at the OOG. People get a little jumpy when they hear the word "rabies," and rightly so. Holler if you have any questions (cell: 321-4528). We're steering inquiries to a couple of level-headed PIOs, Cathie Harms (ADF&G) and Greg Wilkinson (DHSS), and State Veterinarian Bob Gerlach (DEC) is prepared to talk to callers if need be. I'd like to to hear about it if anyone contacts your office about this.

Frank,

Hope you had a fun night with the "Bailey munchkins." My son is 13. It's hard to believe he was once a munchin. Am attaching some pix of his costume. Of all things... he decided he wanted to be a "moose nugget." I guess he's a real Alaska boy.

As for your questions about Rural CAP... I'm familiar with the agency, but not with the Governor's appointment. With my graveyard schedule, I've not been so good about reading the newspaper thoroughly. So I'm not sure what you're referring to.

Is an appointment about to be made?

Thanks,

Rhonda
